PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Gday member's,

Welcome to another edition of Chevolution.

Firstly a bit of housekeeping

As you should be aware we have up for sale now the Club Wagon and Club Caravan for reasons mentioned previously. The intention is to replace these with a fit purpose enclosed trailer. At present we have had no official offers on these items only verbal comments.

It was mentioned in the leadup for the Special General Meeting if anyone had any comments or feedback with the sale of these items email the club at the admin@chevperformancesa.com email address. Text messages/Facebook comments or 3rd party conversations are not accepted.

Coming up soon is the Club Registration days. We have set 2 days this year and we are hoping that everyone can attend one of these days. If you cannot attend on these days you are welcome to come to a meeting. Note that once the meeting starts no club registration will be done as this interrupts the meeting. Make sure you speak to a registration officer leading up to the meeting and get to the clubrooms early. The numerous home visits to do club registration is taking its toll on some of the officers. Please respect that our Registration Officers as with all positions are volunteers.

AGM coming up soon. ALL positions available for nomination
We will be having a new position this year and that is of "CPA event coordinator". If this sounds like a role that you would like to fill let me know.

See you at the meeting.

Scotty

BREAKING NEWSGM will stop making the Chevy Camaro, but a successor may be in the works

March 23, 2023 11:34 AM ET

By The Associated Press

<https://www.npr.org/2023/03/23/1165589143/gm-will-stop-making-the-chevy-camaro-but-a-successor-may-be-in-works#:~:text=In%20addition%2C%20Ford%20rolled%20out,to%20enthusiasts%20and%20younger%20buyers.>

DETROIT — The Chevrolet Camaro, for decades the dream car of many teenage American males, is going out of production.

General Motors, which sells the brawny muscle car, said Wednesday it will stop making the current generation early next year.

The future of the car, which is raced on NASCAR and other circuits, is a bit murky. GM says another generation may be in the works.

"While we are not announcing an immediate successor today, rest assured, this is not the end of Camaro's story," Scott Bell, vice president of Chevrolet, said in a statement.

The Corvette is going hybrid – and that's making it even faster

The current sixth-generation Camaro, introduced in 2016, has done well on the racetrack, but sales have been tailing off in recent years. When the current generation Camaro came out in 2016, Chevrolet sold 72,705 of them. But by the end of 2021 that number fell almost 70% to 21,893. It rebounded a bit last year to 24,652.

GM said last of the 2024 model year of the cars will come off the assembly line in Lansing, Michigan, in January.

Spokesman Trevor Thompkins said he can't say anything more about a future Camaro. "We're not saying anything specific right now," he said.

Sponsor MessageAny successor to the Camaro is expected to be electric

If GM revives the Camaro, it almost certainly will be electric, said Stephanie Brinley, an associate director with S&P Global Mobility. "It would be unlikely to see another internal combustion engine vehicle," she said.

GM has said it plans to sell only electric passenger vehicles worldwide by 2035.

Decoding General Motors Body Style Designations

<https://blog.opgi.com/2013/05/decoding-general-motors-body-style-designations/>

General Motors vehicles have long been produced on shared platforms with each platform or body type fitting into designated GM vehicle “families” that use alphabet letters to separate them. The alphabetic codes used were always single letters and way back in 1946 GM began using a standard set of body style codes consisting of just the four letters A, B, C and D. Four different letter designations were all that was needed at the time because GM’s assortment of vehicles was relatively small in the years prior to World War II. At that time, the alphabet letter codes also corresponded to the 4th letter of each car’s Vehicle Identification Number (VIN). In those early years, GM also began using the standardized alphabetic body style designations to identify parts and accessories for each body style as well as applying the codes to service manuals, owner manuals, and other vehicle-specific publications.

The simple, four body style codes worked as intended, and GM continued to use the A,B,C and D designation system all the way up until 1960 when things started to get more complicated. At that time, GM began creating new cars with many different body styles and the alphabetic code system had to grow and change with the passage of time. What began as a simple four letter code system eventually grew to contain many different alphabet letters and it became increasingly difficult to identify the different GM body styles correctly. In the years following 1960, the year of a vehicle’s production started influencing the alphabetic body style codes and some cars changed designations from one letter to another, making both year and body style interdependent when attempting to identify a GM body style correctly. From 1961 to 1965, GM added three more letter designations (E, X and Y) and some cars, like the Buick Special, that were “B body” prior to 1961, became “A body” cars in the mid ‘60s.

In the years that followed, the once simple alphabet codes became far less simple and some cars changed codes after major redesigns, and some did not, like the “E-body” Oldsmobile Toronado that retained the “E” letter designation even though it was heavily redesigned four times from 1966 to 1992. In the years from 1966 to 1970 GM kept the codes to eight letters, but the letters changed. The “Y” code was dropped and “F” and “G” were added, transforming the code letters to A, B, C, D, E, F, G and X. In the period between 1971 and 1975, GM added an “H” code as well as a new “K” code.

The code continued to grow and between ‘76 and ‘80 GM added a “T” code for the Chevy Chevette compact. Things got more complex in the first half of the ‘80s when GM added the letters J, K, N, R, S, and T. More confusion came in 1982 when GM transformed the entire “A body” line from rear-wheel drive cars to front-wheel drive versions. At that time GM also decided to re-designate the remaining rear-wheel drive cars to the “G” code.

For those GM car owners who are uncertain as to exactly which code matches their classic car, the individual models are listed by year and body code up to the year 1985 over page.

The Corvette was treated separately from the general Chevrolet range and known as the “Y” Platform.

First Y platform (1960–1963) and the Second Y platform (1976–2019).

FLASH BACK (From 2009) MASTER (Chev) CHEF

It came to light at our Christmas Picnic the “Master Chef” in the club. Although his Corvette may be tough we found a “sweet” side to Neville Smallacombe (only in the kitchen!). Neville surprised us all when his wife Chris presented a tasty dessert at the Xmas picnic. He explained to the moreish crowd waiting that he had perfected this recipe over the years. It was unanimous from the crowd’s reaction that it was a success!

Nev’s Slice (Handed down thru generations)

The recipe:

2 packets	Lattice biscuits
1 packet	Philly cream cheese
4ozs	unsalted butter
4ozs	Castor sugar
1 teaspoon	Gelatine
2 tablespoons	Lemon juice

Line a Swiss Roll cake tin with alfoil
Place one layer of biscuits on bottom of tray
Mix cream cheese, butter and sugar thoroughly
Dissolve gelatine in lemon juice from microwave
Stir into mixture
Spread of biscuits
Place another layer of biscuits over the top
Set in fridge
Sprinkle with icing sugar
Cut into slices

ENJOY!

Thanks Neville – we won’t tell anyone!
